

Training and Support to Prepare Caring Adults for Online Learning Success

It takes a village.

Now more than ever, school districts, parents, and families recognize the urgent need to support learning at home and in the many different environments where your child may be learning virtually. Stride Learning Solutions is here to help support the caring adults in a child's learning journey.

The Role of the Caring Adult

Your school or district has partnered with Stride Learning Solutions to provide online learning services for your student this school year, along with support for the caring adults who will help facilitate learning in the variety of settings where it may take place.

Stride training, made available through your district, will provide access to a wide range of support resources to help prepare you as a caring adult with an essential role in your student's learning.

Rest assured that the Stride Learning Solutions curriculum your child will be using is easy to navigate and includes student-centered, adaptive online activities that will help deliver immediate feedback to you and your student. This feedback will equip you to support your child as he/she works through the content and practice activities.

What does the Caring Adult do?

As a caring adult, you will act as the Learning Coach for the child. Parents, grandparents, childcare providers, and others often fill this role. As the Learning Coach, the caring adult supports learning outside of the traditional school setting to help make student success a reality.

Exactly what this looks like varies from child to child. How much assistance is needed generally depends on the child's grade level and their ability to complete work independently.

Typically, in this role, you will:

- Assist with lessons or support students working independently
- Check for understanding
- Support and encourage learning
- Communicate with teachers
